Annual Conference

Paul Gilligan, Paul Keane, William McKechnie

Paul Gilligan practiced as a barrister in Ireland for 32 years, becoming Senior Counsel in 1984. Appointed as a High Court Judge in 2003, he later led the Chancery Division before joining the Court of Appeal, retiring in 2018. He represented the Irish Judiciary in European organisations, serving as President of the European Network of Councils for the Judiciary in 2012–2014. Gilligan is a qualified and accredited mediator and fellow with the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators and practises as a mediator mainly in the commercial area. Gilligan is currently a Vice-President of European Association of Judges for Mediation (GEMME). He is also one of the Co-Chairs of the Irish Hub.

Paul Keane is a practising lawyer in Reddy Charlton Solicitors. Since his appointment as Honorary Consul General of Sweden in 2010, Keane has been responsible for consular and trade services for the Swedish community in Ireland. In 2019, Keane was awarded the Order of the Polar Star by HM Carl Gustaf. He is a Member of the Council of the Law Society of Ireland, where he is Chair of Finance. In 2022, he was appointed to the Council of the IBA. Keane is a Founding Member (and former President) of Interleges, Chair of the Swedish Chamber of Commerce in Ireland and one of the Co-Chairs of the Irish Hub.

In 2000, William McKechnie became a High Court Judge (Main Trial Court) and in 2010 a Supreme Court Judge (Final Appellate Court) (R 2021). He holds an LLM (European Law; Fundamental Rights). He has been President of the Association of European Competition Law Judges (2010–2014); Chairperson of the General Bar of Ireland (1998–2000); Chairperson of the Valuation Tribunal of Ireland (1995–2000) and Chairperson of the Editorial Board of the Judicial Studies Institute Journal (2002–2007). He has also been an ELI Council member and a member of the Membership Committee since 2019. McKechnie has authored several publications. He is one of the Co-Chairs of the Irish Hub.

IRISH HUB

Join us in Dublin

The Irish Hub extends a warm invitation to you to come to Dublin for ELI's Annual Conference between Wednesday, 9 October and Friday, 11 October this year. We want you, and those dear to you, to have a fulfilling and memorable time in our city.

The Annual Conference is an opportunity to meet old (and new) friends and to participate in the latest work of ELI.

The Agenda

As usual, the work programme is packed with contributions from leading academics, judges and practitioners. Dublin is the European capital of the Tech Titans. So it is appropriate that the agenda should concentrate on topics relating to digitalisation, one of the key themes of ELI's work. This will extend to the Keynote session, which will debate the issue of Artificial Intelligence (AI) and human rights.

But there is much, much more to be explored in the wide range of panels of experts that will be presented during the Conference (see pages 8 to 11 of this Newsletter).

Our Hosts and Venues

Both the King's Inns and the Law Society of Ireland have been extraordinarily generous in hosting our Conference and in putting their facilities at our disposal.

We will be based in the legal quarter, on the north side of the city, but within easy reach of its commercial centre. The Conference will be held in the King's Inns, the home for Irish barristers. In addition to the splendid architecture of the building, there are wonderful paintings to delight the eye and the library is a charming and historic repository of legal learning. The Gala Dinner will be enjoyed in the imposing Dining Hall. The King's Inns have a deserved reputation for the excellence of their table. We can expect an exceptional evening.

The Opening Reception will take place in the headquarters of the Law Society of Ireland, the representative and regulator of 12,000 Irish solicitors. The building, in the Palladian style, goes back to 1770 and has been carefully restored and maintained by the Law Society.

Fitzwilliam Lawn Tennis Club will be the magnificent location for the Social Event on Friday evening. This is the premier tennis club in Ireland, situated close to the Georgian Quarter, on the south side of the city. We are promised great food and wine and some fun to celebrate a great Conference.

Industry Event

The Industry Event is a new element associated with the Annual Conference. The event will explore the difficult issues that arise from the interplay of the GDPR and AI. It is aimed primarily at the legal community in Ireland and their clients. The objective is to raise the local profile of ELI and to raise a modest contribution to the cost of the Conference.

The Law Society of Ireland has, extraordinarily for the benefit of ELI, taken on the task of the promotion and staging of the event. The Society is also providing its fine President's Hall for the event, entertaining us with a reception afterwards.

“ The Annual Conference is an opportunity to meet old (and new) friends and to participate in the latest work of ELI. ”

The Industry Event will leverage the expertise of leading speakers at our Conference together with additional leading speakers based in Dublin.

These include:

- Justice Gerard Hogan of the Supreme Court (former Advocate General of the European Court of Justice)
- Professor Pascal Pichonnaz (ELI President; University of Fribourg)
- Sir Geoffrey Vos (Master of the Rolls and Head of Civil Justice in England and Wales)
- Jeremy Godfrey (Chair of Ireland’s regulator of Media, and thus of the many leading internet platforms serving the EU based in Ireland)
- Emma Redmond (Assistant General Counsel for privacy and data protection – Open AI).
- Irene Nicolaidou (Deputy Chair of the European Data Protection Board)

Further details of the event can be found here.

Cultural Programme

We want you to get to know something of the history and culture of Dublin. There are optional (free!) tours of King’s Inns, the Law Society, Georgian Dublin as well as the National Gallery of Ireland, which should not be missed and there will be a sample of music at the Gala Dinner and Social Event. We hope that you will continue your stay for a couple of days. We will be happy to help with suggestions of where to go, both in the city and beyond.

Sponsors

The Conference could not take place without the generous support of sponsors and the host institutions nor the unstinting efforts of the members of the Irish Hub.

In addition to the support of our hosts, King’s Inns and the Law Society of Ireland, two of our leading law firms, Phillip Lee LLP and Reddy Charlton LLP, are providing generous financial sponsorship. They are also welcoming us to their offices as part of the Walking Tour of Georgian Dublin on Friday. Newbridge Silverware is Ireland’s foremost giftware company and has also been most supportive. It has a beautiful shop and restaurant within an hour from Dublin and boasts an award-winning museum showing rare memorabilia from Hollywood and Irish cinema. Cutlery and jewellery are made on site and a factory tour can be organised. You can also find them on their website, and in outlets in Dublin.

We really look forward to welcoming you to Dublin in October!

Assessing the Impact of KlimaSeniorinnen and Associated Rulings

A case that sparked polarised reactions on the ECtHR's role on climate policymaking

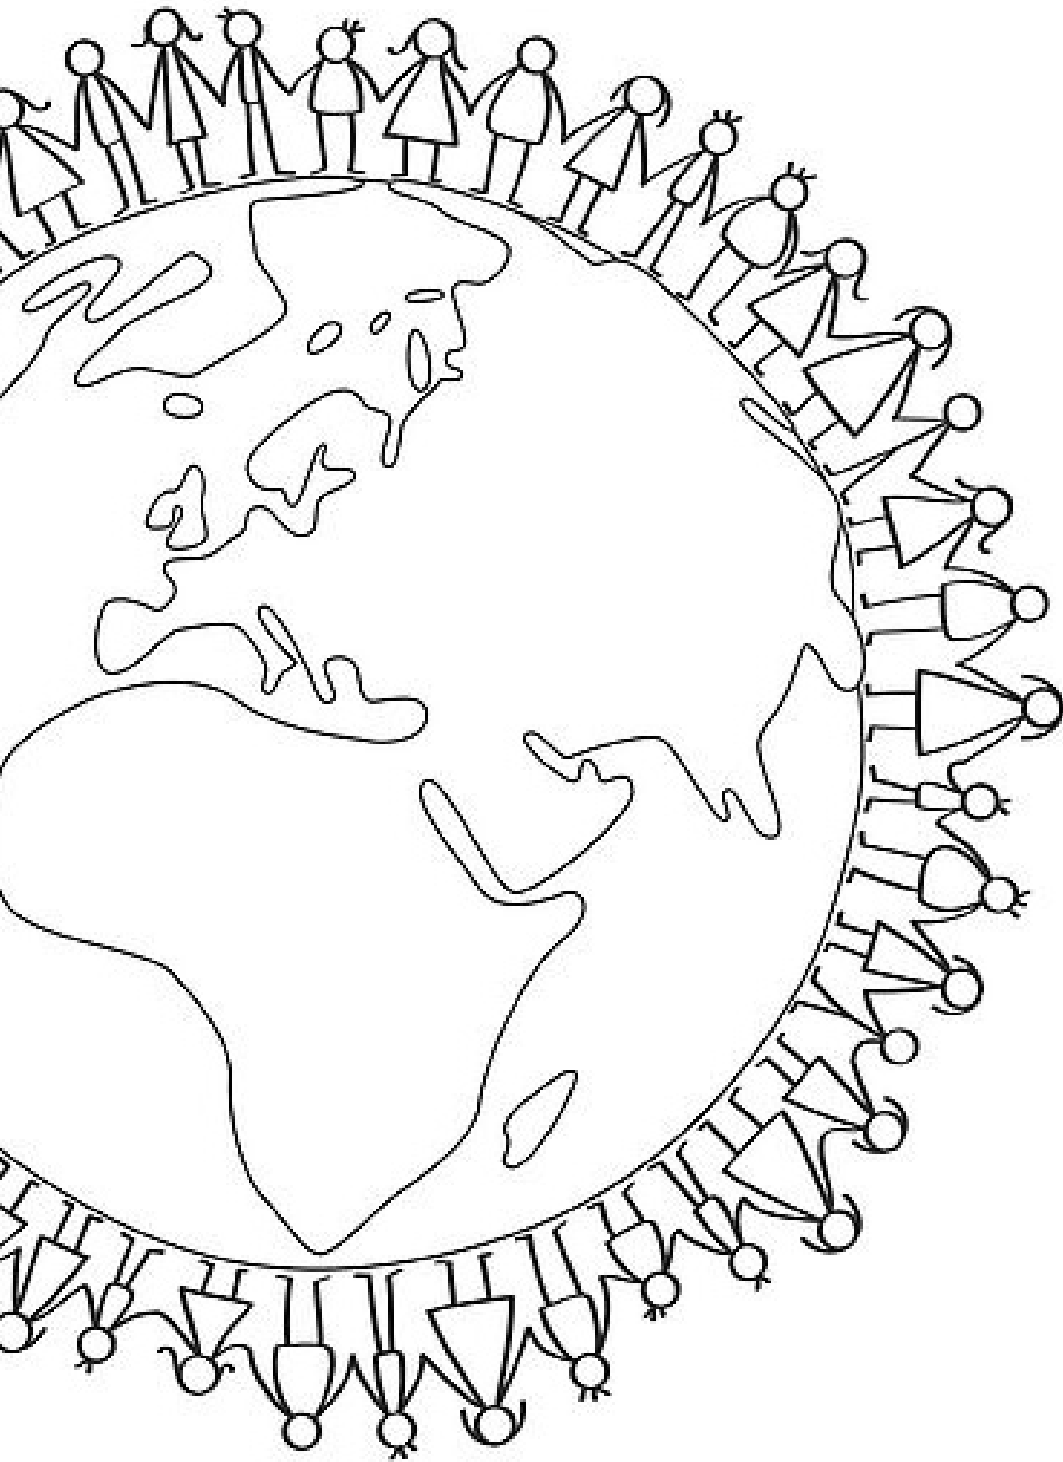

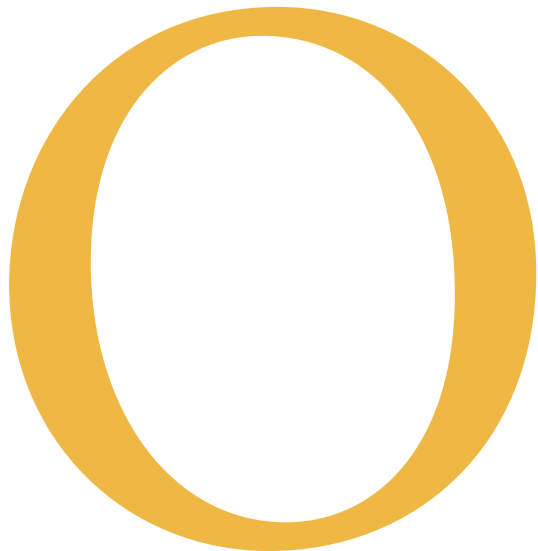

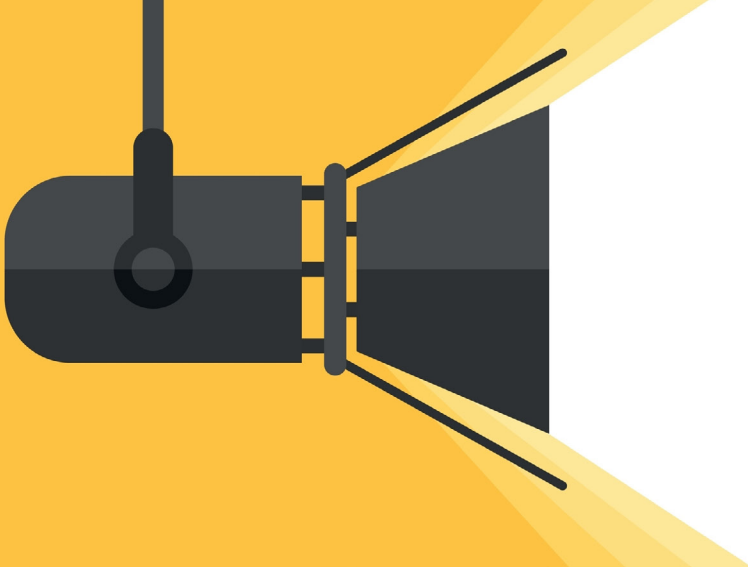

In this Spotlight, Véronique Boilet examines Switzerland's response to a European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) ruling of 9 April 2024, Verein Klimaseniorinnen Schweiz and Others v Switzerland, that condemned Switzerland for inadequate action on reducing greenhouse gas emissions. The case was the subject of an ELI webinar on 24 June 2024. Among the contributors was Prof Boilet. More about the webinar here.

Spotlight by Véronique Boillet

Véronique Boillet is a Professor at the Law School of the University of Lausanne and member of the Board of the Swiss Institution for Human Rights. She has in-depth knowledge of the European and Swiss constitutional system, which she has taught since 2017 and has analysed in several contributions published in European and Swiss law journals.

Her interests include the principle of non-discrimination and the link between the environment and human rights.

On 9 April 2024, Switzerland was condemned by the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) in the case of *Klimaseniorinnen Schweiz and others v Switzerland*¹ for violating Articles 6 and 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR).

This condemnation – and more specifically the fact that the Court ruled that Switzerland has violated Article 8 ECHR because it has not adopted sufficient measures to achieve a significant and progressive reduction of its greenhouse gas emission levels to reach net neutrality over the next three decades – gave rise to unprecedented protest among a large number of Swiss politicians. In addition to the outraged reactions in the media, both chambers of the Federal Parliament² and the Swiss Government³ issued statements questioning the legitimacy of the judgment.

In particular, they called on the Court to respect the sovereignty of States and their democratic process. They urged the Swiss Government to inform the Committee of Ministers that Switzerland had already adopted all the necessary measures to comply with its treaty obligations, implying that no further action would be taken on the judgment. This piece aims to focus on these two aspects.

Members of parliament have protested the ruling claiming that it calls into question the will of the people. Parliamentarians argue that the Court's decision undermines the Swiss democratic principle because of a referendum in June 2021 in which the Swiss people rejected a CO2 bill.⁴ According to politicians, it was because the rejection came from the people that the Court exceeded its prerogatives, thereby undermining democratic processes.

In Switzerland, the electorate is recognised as the supreme body. It has considerable power in constitutional matters through the rights of referendum and initiative (art 138 ff Federal Constitution). The exercise of the latter right is, apart from a few formal conditions, limited only by the imperative rules of international law. Proposals that are problematic from the point of view of the ECtHR are frequently formulated,⁵ thereby underpinning the widespread belief that the people are above the law. However, while proposals for constitutional amendments that fail to comply with the provisions of the ECtHR may indeed be considered valid by the Federal Parliament, their implementation must then comply with the Convention. The Federal Supreme Court expressly reiterated that requirement in a landmark ruling.⁶

In other words, the Swiss electorate is not above the law and, more specifically, popular decisions must be implemented in a manner that complies with the ECtHR. And the judges of the European Court did not fail to recall this principle in their judgment, seeming to anticipate the political reactions in Switzerland.

§ 412, 'democracy cannot be reduced to the will of the majority of the electorate and elected representatives, in disregard of the requirements of the rule of law. The remit of domestic courts and the Court is therefore complementary to those democratic processes. The task of the judiciary is to ensure the necessary oversight of compliance with legal requirements.'

Turning now to Switzerland's refusal to comply with the judgment, the inadequacy of Swiss authorities' response should be underlined. They noted that on 30 September 2022, the Swiss people adopted the Federal Act on Targets for Climate Protection, Innovation and Improved Energy Security, which sets a net zero target for 2050, an intermediate target for 2040 and average targets for the years 2031–2040 and 2041–2050. However, the Court had already taken this law into consideration (§ 564 ff) and held that it was not sufficient to meet the positive obligations deduced from art 8 ECtHR.

As for the revision of the CO2 Act adopted on 15 March 2024, which is also being referred to by the Swiss authorities,⁷ it has already been judged to be largely insufficient by civil society.⁸

Given the above, we cannot but observe that the statements made by the Swiss authorities are highly problematic because they call into question the legitimacy of the Court and judicial review in general. They imply that the Court has engaged in judicial activism, even though it has a rich body of case law on environmental matters to support such a conclusion.

They imply that the Court is undermining democratic processes, when it is the judge's responsibility to ensure that the decisions of all public bodies, including the people, comply with human rights. And finally, they suggest that the Court is undermining the separation of powers by dictating climate policy to the Swiss Parliament, even though the Court emphasises that Parliament has big discretion when it comes to choosing concrete measures (eg the sectors in which action should be taken). As Charlotte Blattner pointed out 'It is thus important to disentangle justified criticism from 'opportunistic' criticism, which merely uses the ruling to express general disapproval of the ECtHR and climate lawsuits more broadly'.⁹

New Project Announcement - ELI French Hub

ELI members are invited to join the kick-off workshop on 17 October 2024 (15:00–18:30 CET) at the Catholic University of Lyon to explore opportunities for involvement.

Brief background: The Covid-19 pandemic and the Ukraine war have revealed the fragility of our globalised world, where the focus on economic performance weakens resilience. Climate change will likely trigger more crises, making it crucial to ensure access to essential goods and services at a European level.

The notion of essential goods is key to both fighting poverty and strengthening societal resilience. It goes beyond common goods by ensuring access during crises.

The focus of this project is to define what qualifies as essential and create a legal framework to protect these goods, some of which may always require special legal protections.
