The Library "A. De Marsico" of Castel Capuano.

Castel Capuano is the ancient seat of the Naples Tribunal.

Wanted in the 12th century by William I the Norman, Castel Capuano was built to defend the nearby Porta Capuana - the threshold of the road to Capua from which the name derives - and was enlarged by Frederick II of Swabia in 1231 to become a royal residence. It was from the Angevin domination that Castel Capuano began to identify itself with the legislative power and precisely because the headquarters of the Regia Camera della Sommaria, the main administrative and jurisdictional body of the Kingdom of Naples, was established there, while the rooms of the Library were destined to the meetings of the Grand Council. A frame of lavish celebrations for the marriage of princes and rulers, Castel Capuano is also remembered as a place of conspiracies and crimes: the Gran Siniscalco Ser Gianni Caracciolo, the favorite of Queen Giovanna II, was assassinated here in 1432.

Since its foundation in 1936, the Library "A. De Marsico" and the heritage that is kept there express the intellectual bond that historically animates the relationship between magistrates and lawyers.

The entire book patrimony - thus collected and already placed in the rooms occupied by the Seventh Civil Section of the Court of Naples - was estimated worthy of a greater location in October 1936, on the initiative of the lawyers 'and prosecutors' union. The choice fell on today's Conference hall, the meeting place of the Grand Council at the time of Queen Giovanna I and then hall of the Gran Corte Criminale, where the trials of 1848 were celebrated and where Luigi Settembrini was sentenced to death in 1857.

It is important to remember that the libraries of the nineteenth-century Neapolitan lawyers were particularly rich in foreign volumes - in particular French, given the transalpine derivation of the judicial system from the reforms between 1806 and 1815 - and therefore had a high antiquarian value.

Each of these small libraries - in which the Neapolitan jurists had carefully and lovingly collected juridical books and even literature - constitutes a real treasure and all together they were able to illuminate the scholars of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

La Union des Avocats Européens (U.A.E.) The Union des Avocats Européens (U.A.E.) was founded in Luxembourg in 1986 by a group of a leading partitioners as a non-profit association devoted to promoting the practice of law within the European Community (as the European Union was then called), the ethical practices of European Lawyers, as well as to advancing the practice of EU law and law derived from the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

The European Law Institute (ELI) is an independent, inspired by the activities of the American Law Institute (ALI), established in 1923, ELI serves a similar purpose within the European legal context, focusing on European legal development in a global context. ELI's mission is to initiate, conduct, and facilitate research, make recommendations, and provide practical guidance on European legal development. It is committed to shaping law not just as it is, but as it should be. The Institute organises its work around projects, which can be long-term or responses to emerging legislative developments, covering all branches of law, substantive and procedural, public and private. In its quest for better law-making, the Institute strives to understand and bridge the oft-perceived tensions between different legal cultures, as well as between scholarship and practice. To accomplish its tasks, the Institute operates primarily on its own initiative but is also consulted by European, international, and national bodies. Its inclusive approach involves wide consultation within its network of over 1,700 Individual Members and 160 Institutional Members. Notable Institutional Members are the European Parliament, the Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU), the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL), the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law (UNIDROIT), several supreme courts in Europe, law firms, faculties and professional associations, including the Council of Bars and Law Societies of Europe (CCBE), the Council of the Notariats of the European Union (CNUE), the European Network of Councils for the Judiciary (ENCJ) and the Network of the Presidents of the Supreme Judicial Courts of the European Union. Since its inception, the Institute has developed strong collaborative ties with the ALI, the United States Uniform Law Commission (ULC) and the Uniform Law Conference of Canada (ULCC). Additionally, it maintains close working relationships with the European legislature, national ministries of justice, key non-governmental organisations, and other sector-specific stakeholders. The Institute's Individual Members represent a broad and diverse spectrum of the legal community, from the bar, the judiciary, academia, and various other legal professions, and include distinguished figures, such as Presidents of both supranational and national courts.
